

CONTENTS

1 Introduction: The importance of cartoons caricature and satirical art in imperial contexts, Richard Scully & Andrekos Varnava

PART ONE: High Imperialism and Colonialism

2 Courting the Colonies: Linley Sambourne, Punch, and Imperial Allegory, Robert Dingley & Richard Scully

3 'Master Jonathan' in Cuba: A Case Study in Colonial Bildungskarikatur, Albert D. Pionke & Frederick Whiting

4 'The International Siamese Twins': The Iconography of Anglo-American Inter-Imperialism, Stephen Tufnell

5 'Every Dog (No Distinction of Color) Has His Day': Thomas Nast and the Colonization of the American West, Fiona Halloran

PART TWO: The Critique of Empire and the Context of Decolonization –

6 The Making of Harmony and War, from New Year Pictures to Propaganda Cartoons during China's Second Sino-Japanese War, Shaoqian Zhang

7 David Low and India, David Lockwood

8 Between imagined and 'real': Sarikhan's al-Masri Effendi: cartoons in the first half of the 1930s, Keren Zdafee

9 The Iconography of Decolonization in the Cartoons of the Suez Crisis, 1956, Stefanie Wichhart

10 Punch and the Cyprus Emergency, 1955-9, Andrekos Varnava & Casey Raeside

PART THREE: Ambiguities of Empire –

11 Outrage and Imperialism, Confusion and Indifference: Punch and the Armenian Massacres of 1894-6, Leslie Rogne Schumacher

12 Ambiguities in the fight waged by the socialist satirical review Der Wahre Jacob against militarism and imperialism, Jean-Claude Gardes

13 The 'Confounded Socialists' and the 'Commonwealth Co-operative Society': Cartoons and British Imperialism during the Attlee Labour Government, Charlotte Riley

14 Australian cartoonists at the end of Empire: no more 'Australia for the White Man', David Olds & Robert Phiddian

Index